

TAKE A WOK: Chinatown staple Pearl River is moving to the edge of SoHo, between Grand and Broome Streets.

N.Y. Post: Susan May Tell

If you needed a shantung shirt and didn't want to pay Shanghai Tang prices, Pearl River Mart at 277 Canal St. always came to the rescue.

The Asian department store has now signed a lease to move to a new location in the edge of SoHo between Grand and Broome Streets. Edmond Li and Rich Du of Helmsley-Spear repped both Pearl River and the owners of 477 Broadway for the 20,000-square-foot deal on the ground and lower levels.

Pearl River expects its longtime customers will make the trek north and hopes to attract a horde of new ones to its plentiful stock, which runs from woks to widgets.